

ENGLISH – 1705

The minor in English Studies places emphasis on training persons to communicate lucidly, purposefully, and concisely, whether they be writing for a livelihood or using the skill as an adjunct to another expertise. The study of literature is also recognized for its ability to acquaint persons with the world and all the aspects of human experience and to enable them to understand and make value judgments without having to acquire the knowledge empirically themselves. Although it requires only 21 credit hours, the minor curriculum in English will enhance the total education of the student in the majority of programs offered at the college.
