

Motion to Remove the “Double-Dipping” Restriction in the Intellectual Foundations Program

Introduced by the Instruction & Research Committee at the May 2008 Senate meeting

Whereas limitations on students’ ability to “double-dip” requirements between certain Intellectual Foundations categories and their majors present graduation difficulties for students in some majors and

Whereas the goal of breadth in students’ education can be substantively achieved with a less restrictive policy

Be it resolved that the Intellectual Foundations resolution as amended, be changed from the current language:

“Double Dipping.” Each student may select one course from the Cognate Foundations, or American History or Civilizations areas (up to 4 credits total) in her or his major to fulfill both a major requirement and an Intellectual Foundations requirement.

to:

Each student may use courses to fulfill both major requirements and Intellectual Foundations requirements.
